The EC should come up with a plan, how to prevent the following sitation: retailer imports veg from 3500 km state, sells for 1,00 eur. Selling locally sourced veg, for 3 eur, as its local, but the local farmer gets the same price as the 3500 km farmer away. So retailers win, donig huge damage to @greendeal and local food producing farmers. This model is unsustainable and not aligned with eu strategies, thus spending money wreck less not achresults it could

EU Food & Farming

Hi Peter Prekmurc, it is one of our objectives to make sure that farmers get a fair price for their produce The EU Directive on unfair trading practices in particular aims to make the relationship between farmer & retailers more balanced.

If you are an operator in the food chain please make your voice heard by answering our survey on unfair trading practices. The survey is in all languages (select yours on top of the page) and it's open until January 31: http://europa.eu/ltQ79bD
